

Free UGC Pitch Template

by @cimeygallery

This template helps you pitch brands with confidence, even if you are just starting out.

How to use this template

4 steps from template to a pitch that is ready to send

STEP 1 · Research the brand first (5 minutes)

Before you pitch, look at their Instagram, TikTok or website. Find out what their main product is, which campaigns they are running right now, whether they launched anything new, what tone their content has, and whether they have worked with UGC creators before.

A brand can tell right away when you do not know their product, and that is what gets a pitch ignored.

STEP 2 · Prepare these 3 things

1. Your tagline. Pick the one that fits you best:

- "UGC creator focused on [niche]"
- "UGC creator with [X years] of experience making content"
- "UGC creator who has already worked with several brands"
- Or anything else that represents you as a UGC creator

2. Your relevance hook. Answer this: "Why am I the most fitting person to promote this product?"

- What do I have that is unique?
- Am I a user of this product?
- Is there a personal story that relates?

> Examples: You are learning a foreign language, so you pitch a language app. You have sensitive skin, so you pitch a skincare brand. You use the product every day, so you say so.
> This is optional, but the more it relates, the better.

3. One specific content idea. Do not be generic:

> Not "I can make content about your product", but "I want to make a video about [specific moment] that relates to [problem this product solves]."

Examples:

- Language app → "A video of the first time I could chat with a native speaker after learning with this app"
- Skincare brand → "A video of how my skin changed after using this product consistently for 2 weeks"
- Productivity app → "A video of how this app helps me manage several UGC projects at once"

Optional again, but the more it relates, the better.

STEP 3 · Pick the right template

- Brand reached through Instagram or TikTok → use the DM template
- Brand reached through its marketing email → use the email template

STEP 4 · Follow up if there is no reply (after 3 to 5 days)

Adjust it to the brand's tone and to the place where you follow up. This is the professional email version:

> Hi [Brand] team, I hope you're doing well!
> I reached out a few days ago regarding a potential UGC collaboration and just wanted to make sure my message didn't get lost in your inbox.
> I'd love to connect and explore if there's an opportunity for us to work together. Feel free to reply here if you have any questions — I'm happy to share more about my content style, ideas, or rates.
> Thank you!
> Best regards,

EMAIL TEMPLATE

Subject: UGC Collaboration Opportunity — [Your Name]

Hi [Brand Name] Team,

My name is [Your Name], [TAGLINE].

[RELEVANCE HOOK — 1-2 sentences on your personal connection to their product.]

I already have a content idea in mind:
[Example: "A talking head video about how I use [product] as part of my daily routine, targeting [audience], with a hook around [pain point]."]

Here is my portfolio for your reference: [your portfolio link]

I'd be happy to discuss this further, please let me know what content you're looking for and I'll send over my rate card promptly.

Best Regards,
[Your name]

Example

Subject: UGC Collaboration Opportunity — Cimey

Hi SakuraSpeak Team,
My name is Cimey, a content creator who specializes in creating natural and authentic content across apps, productivity, lifestyle, and travel niches.

I'm currently building my UGC portfolio and actively looking for brands to collaborate with. While I'm new to UGC, I've been creating content on my personal page and I'm confident in my ability to produce content that feels genuine and relatable to your audience.

As someone who is actively learning Korean and Chinese, I personally understand the journey your users are on — the excitement, the struggles, and every funny moment in between. That's exactly the angle I'd love to bring to SakuraSpeak's content.

I already have a content idea in mind:
A fun and relatable video showing the real experience of learning a language, from those moments where nothing makes sense to the small wins that keep you going. The kind of content that makes viewers think "this is exactly me" and gets them curious to try SakuraSpeak themselves.

Here is my portfolio for your reference: [link]

I'd love to discuss this further, please let me know what kind of content you're looking for and I'll send over my rate card promptly.

Best regards,
Cimey

This template is a guide, not a fixed rule. Do not copy and paste it without adapting it, because a brand can instantly tell when an email feels generic and was sent to everyone.

What makes a brand interested is not how neat your email is, but how personal and genuine it feels.
